

CHRIS MITCHELL-Is an entertainer, Crew No. 99905, no safety no. He has no emergency duties. As a traveling entertainer has passenger status. He does not participate in drills.

Was sleeping in B-60, port side forward. The announcements woke him; he heard the code Alpha, medical emergency, had heard this before so it did not surprise him. He heard additional code alphas, then heard to report to his lifeboat stations. The captain announced the emergency signal and passengers and crew were to report to their emergency stations. His station was Lifeboat No. 6.

Has been on this ship, 7 weeks. He was on the Norway in Nov. and December. He has worked on other NCL ships as well, Dream, Sky, and another one. He has also worked Royal Caribbean ships, but just for a few weeks.

He did his first sea experience in 94-95, then did not go back into cruise ships until Dec. 2001. He was traveling/performing in between. An agent started getting him bookings.

Cruise ships, money is good, traveling is good, he enjoys. Has never experienced an emergency before. He has heard code alpha before.

About 40-50 people reported to that station. The majority were passengers. One other entertainer was onboard. Everybody seemed calm. Crew was doing their jobs.

The person in charge of the muster station was taking role, others were opening windows. He stayed at the muster station about an hour. After that the passengers were released and the crew waited around for announcements. He returned to his cabin and just waited around for other information.
