

ROGELIO PALOMO, 34 years old, he is dining room cleaner, has been doing this 8 months on the Norway. Before that was waiter. Works about 10 hours a day, from 0600 to 1700, night shift from 1700 to 0300. Last Sunday he was working on day shift. The dining room opens at 0630, he got up late though at 0630 exactly. He rushed to go to work, got to work, and in the juice station of the main galley heard the blast, he looked to the vent saw smoke coming out, that smelled of gasoline. The smoke was light colored. Some passengers had come out to the dining room already.

A few minutes later code alpha and then code bravo. He then got his emergency card and went to his muster station. He stayed on board the vessel until he finished his emergency duty. Things went as they practice every week during drills.
