

Fig. 1. Bow Echo. Typical evolution of a thunderstorm radar echo (a) into a bow echo (b,c) and into a comma echo (d). Dashed line indicates axis of greatest potential for downbursts. Arrows indicate wind flow relative to the storm. Note regions of cyclonic rotation (C) and anticyclonic rotation (A); both regions, especially C, are capable of supporting tornado development in some cases.

Attachment 49