That's terrible.

Was he doing a job? What did he hit? Tree? Or was it terrain?

I've seen people die and it's just terrible, you know the world of pain some people are going to be dropped into is fast approaching....

I assume he was doing his job, got bored and started playing around and hit a tree and crashed into the ground, there was two loud bangs about 3 seconds apart. I would feel sorry under normal circumstances, But he was really acting a fool before it happened.

Do you have any video? Crop dusters are always doing tight maneuvers low to the ground. You said that he was 'trying to do flips' but I don't really know what that means.

Yes, He didn't actually do a flip that i personally witnessed, But he turned sideways and went strait down, and pulled up at the last second, he would also go strait up as if he was attempting to flip but instead he would kind of do what a fish does when it jumps.

He cropdusts my house every week or so, I didn't think to record it. I've seen him out there maneuvering before and it looked "cool". Yesterday when i was watching, it didn't look "cool" it looked "dangerous". I was actually going to complain about him minutes before he died.

3 second would be quite a distance if he was going fast.

He hit a wire, or you think it was structural failure?

Don't feel sorry for the fool, but for his family. That's who pays the price.

There is a small treeline between two fields, he was in the middle of a field, so i figure he hit a tree

We have no idea what happened to cause the crash so don't assume

I know for a fact he was acting a fool, I witnessed it with my own eyes.

Crop dusters do some pretty crazy maneuvers when they are spraying, thats part of their job. Im confused on how YOU know he was acting a fool.

Welp wtf...I came home from work today and asked my moms what they were looking at on the computer because they looked sort of concerned. They told me about THIS plane crash in Tennessee. Apparently it was my step-sister's dad's friend that worked at a local airport there. They didn't tell me what had happened exactly, but yeah.....

I posted a couple other places, I heard you guys might be interested

So, I'm Literally minutes away from posting a rant onto reddit about how close this plane flies to my house, Instead of finishing that post, The plane flies over my house fast and low, I look out and i see him pulling up to miss the treeline, Seconds later he hits the ground.

This is as close as i could get, Sorry if it's hard to see.

EDIT: The man is dead

EDIT: My brother was outside when it happend, He said about 5 minutes prior to the crash, the pilot was attempting to do flips and almost hit several trees several times.
