Started 0630

Started for team (NX-11) to clear track, so mid morning started removing old switch and excavating for new, early afternoon prior to installing new switch we (Warren and I) were making one last measurement of the new switch to be installed. I was on the east side and Warren was on the west with Matt in the excavator between us on the track barely moving in the east direction, we had taken the measurement and with the excavator coming I spun myself around and positioned myself in the clear on the panel (new switch), as I turned and was back facing west I no longer saw Warren, I then noticed Warren at the tightest clearance under the excavator. I hurried ~~and~~ and
