Coastal Waters Forecast
National Weather Service Lake Charles LA
330 PM CST Sun Nov 20 2022

Coastal waters from the Lower Atchafalaya River LA to High Island TX out 60 nautical miles including Sabine and Calcasieu Lakes and Vermilion Bay

Seas are provided as a range of the average height of the highest one third of the waves, along with the occasional height of the average highest ten percent of the waves.

GMZ400-210945-
330 PM CST Sun Nov 20 2022

.SYNOPSIS...

The pressure gradient will gradually relax tonight as a high pressure system moves east across the Mississippi Valley and a low pressure sinks deeper into the Gulf. A small craft advisory will remain in effect for the nearshore waters into Monday. This area of high pressure to the north will continue to influence the coastal waters through the up coming week, with elevated offshore winds and seas.

Coastal Waters Forecast

National Weather Service Lake Charles LA

917 PM CST Sat Nov 19 2022

Coastal waters from the Lower Atchafalaya River LA to High Island TX out 60 nautical miles including Sabine and Calcasieu Lakes and Vermilion Bay

Seas are provided as a range of the average height of the highest one third of the waves, along with the occasional height of the average highest ten percent of the waves.

GMZ400-201615-

917 PM CST Sat Nov 19 2022

.SYNOPSIS...

A tight pressure gradient will continue over the coastal waters for the remainder of the weekend between a high pressure system building down from the Plains and a low pressure system moving across the central Gulf of Mexico. This will result in strong and gusty northerly winds and rough seas persisting over the coastal waters, with gale warnings for the outer Gulf waters and a small craft advisory for the nearshore waters through Sunday. This area of high pressure to the north will continue to influence the coastal waters into early next week, with elevated offshore winds and rough seas the end result.

.SYNOPSIS...

A tight pressure gradient will continue over the coastal waters this weekend between a high pressure system building down from the Plains and a low pressure system moving across the central Gulf of Mexico. This will result in strong and gusty northerly winds and rough seas persisting over the coastal waters, with gale warnings for the outer Gulf waters and a small craft advisory for the nearshore waters through Sunday. This area of high pressure to the north will continue to influence the coastal waters into early next week, with elevated offshore winds and rough seas the end result.

Coastal Waters Forecast

National Weather Service Lake Charles LA

246 PM CST Fri Nov 18 2022

Coastal waters from the Lower Atchafalaya River LA to High Island TX out 60 nautical miles including Sabine and Calcasieu Lakes and Vermilion Bay

Seas are provided as a range of the average height of the highest one third of the waves, along with the occasional height of the average highest ten percent of the waves.

GMZ400-190930-

246 PM CST Fri Nov 18 2022

.SYNOPSIS...

A tight pressure gradient over the coastal waters this weekend between a high pressure system building down from the Plains and a low pressure system moving across the central Gulf of Mexico will produce strong and gusty northerly winds and rough seas over the coastal waters. Gale conditions are expected over the outer waters on Saturday into early Sunday. An upper level disturbance will bring widespread mainly light rain tonight into Saturday night. High pressure to the north will continue to ridge into the coastal waters into early next week, with elevated offshore winds the result.

.SYNOPSIS...

Elevated winds and seas will persist over the Gulf waters through the next few days, with winds a little lighter over the coastal lakes and bays. Today, winds will generally remain around 15-20kts, with higher gusts, but will begin to increase later this evening as another coastal low develops offshore and move east. This low and associated cold front will also bring widespread showers and much stronger offshore flow by tonight, continue through Saturday. Frequent wind gusts to gale force will be possible along with seas around 5-8 feet. Winds will diminish during the day Sunday, but otherwise remain elevated through early next week.

Coastal Waters Forecast

National Weather Service Lake Charles LA

318 AM CST Fri Nov 18 2022

Coastal waters from the Lower Atchafalaya River LA to High Island TX out 60 nautical miles including Sabine and Calcasieu Lakes and Vermilion Bay

Seas are provided as a range of the average height of the highest one third of the waves, along with the occasional height of the average highest ten percent of the waves.

GMZ400-182145-

318 AM CST Fri Nov 18 2022

.SYNOPSIS...

Elevated winds and seas will persist over the Gulf waters through the next few days, with winds a little lighter over the coastal lakes and bays. Today, winds will generally remain around 15-20kts, with higher gusts, but will begin to increase later this evening as another coastal low develops offshore and move east. This low and associated cold front will also bring widespread showers and much stronger offshore flow by tonight, continue through Saturday. Frequent wind gusts to gale force will be possible along with seas around 5-8 feet. Winds will diminish during the day Sunday, but otherwise remain elevated through early next week.
